As Jazz at Lincoln Center enters its 36th season, we intend to celebrate the vision, leadership, artistic integrity and virtuosity of our managing and artistic director, Wynton Marsalis, by embracing his relentless desire for excellence. In that spirit, we welcome you to this newly designed Annual Report. The pages that follow highlight our achievements from this past fiscal year and illustrate the many ways in which our wide array of programs synchronize to make a more powerful whole.

This past season’s theme, “All Jazz is Global” echoed across the stages of The House of Swing and traveled the world thanks to our incomparable Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis. The JLCO performed from Wickenburg, Arizona to Wroclaw, Poland; Toronto, Canada to Timisoara, Romania; and dozens of points in between while also anchoring our concert season in Rose Theater (with a special concert in The Appel Room, the most recent in our ongoing Journey Through Jazz series). We look back with gratitude and acknowledge the dedication and support of our chair, Clarence Otis and our Board of Directors; the financial relief that emerged when, after all of that time and work that is consonant with JALC’s mission. We can harmonize better to create more concerts in existing and new places where more working musicians can perform for ever-growing, ever-more-informed, ever-more-appreciative audiences.

In this spirit, JALC has formed an Artist Advisory Council to spark innovation in our programming and perceive creative new ways for JALC to operate and participate. We asked the new Council to share their voice. In the spirit of swing, we cede the page.

Greg Scholl, Executive Director

Upon achieving a major milestone, we tend to be flooded with well-deserved adrenaline. Afterwards, we undergo an emotional drop that begs the question, “What’s next?” Often we don’t know what to do with ourselves until we dive into our next initiative. And the cycle begins again.

Performing and touring frequently falls into that same pattern. It’s an ebb and flow, but on a rapid scale, essentially occurring on a daily basis. We push through the travel days, we sharpen our focus during the rehearsal periods, and we recreate pre-concert routines night after night. All this momentum leads to a certain state that we work to achieve on stage—a flow where the band is swinging and the listeners are connecting. And then, inevitably, we feel the ebb when we pack up our horns, get our suitcases on the truck, and hop on the next bus or flight. We need these elements to coexist in order for us to move forward.

We wish that all of you could witness the reception of the Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra in concert halls throughout the U.S., Europe, Mexico, and beyond. From performing encores—sometimes three times in one night—at the request of a roaring crowd to engaging with students who wait eagerly at the stage door with questions or thanking those fans who drove hours from their hometowns just to hear their heroes play, the JLCO is wholly invested in a symbiotic relationship with their audiences. In turn, it’s clear concert-goers want to be a part of something greater than themselves, something that highlights our common ground. This communion reminds people of the importance of celebrating unique voices, while also contributing positively to and respecting the role of the group. In a sense, it echoes the reality of life and what it means to be human.

Our belief is that this sacred practice is at the heart of what Jazz at Lincoln Center and the Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis represents to so many people around the world. And for that reason, JALC’s first Artist Advisory Council is taking a hard look at where we stand now and where we need to go by asking ourselves these questions on a daily basis: What would it look like if we could bring our hometown people together in the same deeply meaningful way we experience performing abroad? In what ways can we ensure that we are celebrating and showcasing all voices? What are our next steps in educating the next generation of musicians and jazz aficionados? How is the jazz community at large changing? How will Jazz at Lincoln Center’s mission evolve over time?

For a moment, we encourage you to think back to one of your proudest moments as an individual or a collective. Remind yourselves of the unique challenges that arose along the journey, and the tireless grit, determination, and focus that were required in order to accomplish your mission. Next, tap into the euphoric feeling of achievement, celebration, and relief that emerged when, after all of that time and hard work, your goal was finally realized.

EBB & FLOW

It is a privilege for us to be a part of this Council and to learn from you all in this capacity. We look forward to sharing more with you.

Warmly,
The Artist Advisory Council

Our seven-member Council is dedicated to answering these questions and having ongoing discussions surrounding the idea of ebb and flow as we work to develop initiatives that will continue to bring people together to celebrate our similarities and differences through jazz. Together, we are deeply committed to the Jazz at Lincoln Center community, as well as the communities that raised us.

In the coming season, you’ll see a series of Dizzy’s Club dates curated by the Artist Advisory Council in an effort to highlight different voices and explore new pathways of collaboration and building community as the world ebbs and flows around us.

CARLOS HENRIQUEZ ON JLCO TOURING

“It amazes me across how much territory globally we’ve spread the joy of jazz through concerts and touring. From Africa to Cuba to South America or a quick stop in San Juan, Puerto Rico, we have thrilled the world with this fabulous art form called Jazz!”

CHRIS CRENSHAW ON JLCO MISSION

“We as an organization are steadfast in our mission as other elements around us change, so when there’s no other option, one can always come home.”

TED NASH ON JLCO REACH

“There have been times when we’ve arrived in a city where I would assume people aren’t that aware of what we do, but am often pleasantly surprised when we are approached after a concert and young musicians are holding JLCO CDs, asking for us to sign them. I began to understand the reach of our livestreams and other channels where people across the world can see and hear the band.”

SUMMER CAMARGO ON JLCO IMPACT

“I toured with the orchestra during their Big Band Holidays performances this past winter, and during that tour, I saw the flicker of excitement and inspiration in the students’ eyes when I spoke with them. Whether they were inspired to become jazz musicians, to keep playing their instruments, or to listen to more jazz, the orchestra continues to shape the lives of all generations.”

CHRIS LEWIS ON JLCO CONNECTION

“On the road, I’ve seen people dance, moved to tears, and rejoice in their shared experience of the music we play. The power is in the spirit of the music and its ability to reach people, regardless of the lines of demarcation that humans tend to impose upon ourselves: language, class, skin color, gender, etc.”
Jazz at Lincoln Center’s 2022-23 performance season, presented by Jody and John Arnhold, encompassed the idea of jazz as a global language and integrated that theme into year-long programming. From ground-breaking concerts in The House of Swing to evening celebrations at Dizzy’s Club, artists from around the world united with JALC musicians to perform dynamic, in-depth cultural explorations of jazz.

Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra (JLCO) with Wynton Marsalis toured many of those collaborations to cities across the U.S., as well as countries throughout the world. JALC also found audiences right here in New York City with the continuation of the successful outdoor concert series Swing in the Streets.
Throughout the JALC 2022-23 season, the Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis took to the Rose Theater and The Appel Room stages to lead audiences on an around-the-world journey that illuminated, actualized, and reaffirmed the notion of jazz as a global language. Leading musicians, virtuosic practitioners, and genius composers from Africa, The Middle East, East Asia, Latin America, The Caribbean, and North America, all played a crucial role in this monumental series of concerts.

The first full season since 2019—complete with world premiere commissions and unique collaborations—proved with every celebratory performance that jazz is a true medium for cultural exchange, having the power to cross language barriers and bridge the divides of international communities.
THE SHANGHAI SUITE

The Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis opened the 35th Season with the U.S. premiere of Marsalis’ The Shanghai Suite. Joined by master Chinese musicians and with a clarinet solo by special guest Ye Huang (far left), the orchestra celebrated the mythology, folklore, and culture of China. This concert was presented as part of the Ertegun Jazz Concert Series and made possible, in part, by the Zou Family Fund.

BIG BAND HOLIDAYS

Playing fresh, swinging arrangements of holiday classics, the Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis continued the ever-popular annual tradition, which was music directed by Victor Goines with special guest vocalist and two-time Grammy Award winner Samara Joy.
MIDDLE EAST MEDITATIONS

Iraqi oud virtuoso Naseer Shamma joined Wynton Marsalis and the JLCO, mesmerizing audiences with a musical journey to the Middle East. This Ertegun Jazz Concert Series event featured Shamma’s original works arranged for big band by Marsalis, guitarist Doug Wamble, and members of the orchestra.

JOURNEY THROUGH JAZZ PT. II

JALC presented the second installment of its annual Lynne and Richard Pasculano Jazz Series with Jazz Chronicles: Old and New. Tracing the oral tradition of jazz, the Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis explored stories that give the community of current practitioners agency over the narrative of the music’s development and its living and changing traditions. The Appel Room offered a stunning backdrop of the humming city below that echoed back the themes of shifting variations and movement.
NDUDUZO MAKHATHINI AND HAMILTON DE HOLANDA

South African pianist-composer Nduduzo Makhathini and Brazilian 10-string mandolin (bandolin) wizard Hamilton de Holanda (pictured) shared a bandstand for the first time. They mixed their respective traditions in a unique exploration of the diaspora of African musical culture, from the slave trade and colonization through the present day. They were joined by multi-instrumentalist Richard Bona on the first evening and by singer-songwriter Somi the following evening.

THE MUSIC OF TOSHIKO AKIYOSHI

The Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis celebrated iconic pianist-composer and NEA Jazz Master Toshiko Akiyoshi, whose music combines swing, bebop, classical, and elements drawn from her Japanese heritage. Music was directed by JLCO member Ted Nash and included special guest saxophonist Lew Tabackin.
INTERNATIONALLY ELLINGTON

Under the music direction of Joe Block and featuring a hand-picked ensemble of some of the greatest young talent in jazz today—including a number of alumni from JALC education programs—this Ertegun Jazz Concert Series concert explored the international side of Duke Ellington. In the words of Wynton Marsalis, “Duke was out there in front, dealing with the world as a singular place.”

TRES AGUAS & COLORS OF COLOMBIA

The Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra with Special Guest Paquito D’Rivera premiered a pair of exclusive JALC-commissioned pieces by two prolific and insightful voices: Tres Aguas by Cuban pianist Elio Villafranca and Music of Colombia by Colombian harpist Edmar Castañeda. The performance featured Cuban American contemporary dancer Beatrice Capote (pictured) and flamenco dancer Sonia Oliva.
TITO PUENTE & TITO RODRIGUEZ CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

Jazz at Lincoln Center honored the centennials of two greats: iconic timbalero-vibraphonist-Nuyorican bandleader Tito Puente and San Juan-born vocalist-timbalero-bandleader Tito Rodriguez. Both born in 1923, these musical pioneers revolutionized the Latin dance scene of the 1950s and 1960s and changed the course of jazz. No musician is more qualified to re-interpret their music than Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra bassist, composer, and arranger Carlos Henriquez, who assembled an all-star band for the occasion.

ETIENNE CHARLES’ CARNIVAL

Trinidad & Tobago’s world-famous Carnival celebration came to The Appel Room courtesy of trumpeter, percussionist, and composer Etienne Charles (far right). This high-energy spectacle seamlessly blended American jazz traditions with the thrilling sights and sounds of Trinidadian Carnival.

*Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis performance
On April 19, Jazz at Lincoln Center’s 2023 Gala celebrated American Anthems: From Sea to Shining Sea. Hosted by Gayle King, the concert featured the Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra and special guests Joe Block, Samara Joy, Ashley Pezzotti, Vince Giordano and the Nighthawks, Gregory Porter, Marty Stuart, and Marilyn Maye. After the performance, 575 guests filled the Ertegun Atrium and The Appel Room for a festive dinner, and many continued the celebration at the lively afterparty in Dizzy’s Club.

The 2023 Ed Bradley Award for Leadership was presented to five founding board members: Shahara Ahmad-Llewellyn, Diane Mulcahy Coffey, Gordon J. Davis, Hughlyn F. Fierce, and Michael Fricklas. For more than three decades these steadfast leaders have helped the organization grow, innovate, and expand a global audience for jazz.

Vince Giordano received the 2023 Jazz at Lincoln Center Award For Artistic Excellence. Throughout his career, Giordano has championed the genre of jazz from the 1920s and 1930s, spreading the joy and pathos of an era that shaped our nation.
For several years, Dizzy’s Club, like all music venues, needed to adjust how it operated during the pandemic, which meant having to slim down schedules and host fewer audiences. While it still offered up electrifying performances from Jazz at Lincoln Center’s global community of world-class musicians, the club, with its warm ambience and panoramic views of the Manhattan skyline, was finding its way back to full capacity during a very challenging time.

Then last September, with much anticipation, Dizzy’s Club re-launched its Late Night Sessions. This series was, and is again, an example of the true spirit of JALC’s belief in mentoring and supporting young musicians. Offering a place (and time slots) where emerging artists can gain live experience and prove their chops in front of an intimate crowd of jazz aficionados, Late Night Sessions runs Thursday through Saturday, and features a post-set jam session on Thursday nights.

Dizzy’s Club also had a season full of special performances, including an evening in honor of Stanley Crouch, celebrations of domestic and international jazz icons, concerts with legendary vocalists, Ertegun Hall of Fame tributes, and a new curated concert world premiere that will extend to a 10-week touring show in the upcoming season. In less than a year since the venue has been back on its feet and whole again, Dizzy’s Club garnered its highest ticketing numbers in years.

SING AND SWING: OUR AMERICAN SONGBOOK

Sing and Swing: Our American Songbook, led by trumpeters and vocalists Bria Skonberg (pictured) and Benny Benack III, launched at Dizzy’s Club in November 2022. Curated by JALC’s programming team, this show will now tour performing arts centers nationwide, following its successful trip to Saudi Arabia this past spring.

STANLEY CROUCH CELEBRATION

JALC paid tribute to one of its founders Stanley Crouch, who passed away in 2020. The evening featured music from the Bill Charlap Trio, David Murray, Tammy McCann, Christian McBride, and Jeff “Tain” Watts and words and speeches by Wynton Marsalis and Jelani Cobb.

ERTEGUN HALL OF FAME

Several nights of concerts honored Brazilian composer Antônio Carlos Jobim led by Romero Lubambo featuring special guest Dianne Reeves; South African musician Hugh Masekela led by son Selemo Masekela (pictured); Cuban musician Mario Bauzá led by Carlos Henriquez; and a solo set by Toshiko Akiyoshi followed by a set from multi-reed artist Lew Tabackin and his trio.

MARY STALLINGS AND MARILYN MAYE

Incomparable vocalists, octogenarian Mary Stallings and nonagenarian Marilyn Maye, sang jazz standards back to back at Dizzy’s Club in December 2022.
Throughout the 2022-23 season, the Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis revisited Marsalis’ symphonic works, presented new cross-cultural commissions, and delved into JALC’s extensive library of modern jazz arrangements. The orchestra collaborated with various organizations in the U.S. and abroad to perform his large-scale works and engage in residency activities, including three centered around Marsalis’ 1999 All Rise, Symphony No. 1.

In early autumn, the JLCO, alongside the Minnesota Orchestra, performed two evenings of Marsalis’ Swing Symphony, Symphony No. 3. The band continued its extended fall tour in Mexico with concerts in Guadalajara, Cervantino, and Mexico City, as well as several cities in Texas. For the holiday season, Dianne Reeves and Samara Joy joined the JLCO, under the music direction of Victor Goines, to tour its annual Big Band Holidays program. Then in early 2023, the orchestra traveled throughout the Midwest showcasing the original works of transformative Iraqi oud virtuoso Naseer Shamma. The season wrapped in June with the JLCO’s month-long European tour, which included collaborative performances of Marsalis’ The Jungle, Symphony No. 4 with the Luxembourg Philharmonic, Orchestre de Paris, and Filarmonica Banatul Timișoara in Romania.

As it has for nearly every tour, the JLCO integrated substantial education activities to complement each engagement.

JLCO ON TOUR

WYNTON MARSALIS: ALL RISE
SYMPHONY NO. 1 RESIDENCIES

On three separate occasions during the 2022-23 season, Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra performed Wynton Marsalis’ 1999 All Rise, Symphony No. 1—scored for their 15-piece orchestra, a 90-piece symphonic orchestra, and a choir of more than 100 singers.

Last September, the JLCO collaborated with the Los Angeles Philharmonic at The Hollywood Bowl to present All Rise, which was first performed there more than 20 years ago on Sept. 15, 2001, four days after the tragic events of 9/11. In October, the JLCO presented successive All Rise residencies at the University of Iowa’s Hancher Auditorium and at the University of Michigan.

For more than 25 years, JALC and the University of Michigan have fostered an in-depth relationship which extended into a week-long residency in 2022. Complete with learning and engagement opportunities at the university and across Southeast Michigan, the interactive programming also included numerous master classes and workshops, as well as visits to the Detroit School of Arts and the Milan Correctional Facility where 150 people who are currently incarcerated took part in a Q&A session with orchestra members after they performed.

The residency culminated in three major public performances: a football halftime show with the University of Michigan Marching Band, a big band concert with the Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra at University of Michigan’s Hill Auditorium, and on that same stage and with great fanfare, the Michigan debut of All Rise with over 250 artists and an estimated 3,100 audience attendees, including 850 students.

‡HBCU Residency (Feb 23-25)
This past year saw the growth of one of JALC’s marquee summer partnerships with Times Square. During the summers of 2022 and 2023, Dizzy’s Club and Times Square Alliance collaborated to present the popular Jazz in Times Square series. Most Thursday nights from May through September, the hottest young jazz bands can be found performing at the Times Square Plaza, creating the feeling of an intimate club amidst the lights and sounds of the world’s most iconic city center.

Through the generosity of Phillip and Elizabeth Gross, Jazz at Lincoln Center launched Jazz on the Road in the spring of 2022 which continued successfully through the summer of 2023. As part of JALC’s artist development work, this program, in conjunction with long-time partners of JALC’s education and touring departments, as well as new collaborators, worked to grow awareness of JALC’s mission and support up-and-coming musicians and vocalists. Emerging bandleaders and their bands engaged with communities across the U.S. to perform and teach educational workshops exposing new audiences to traditional and nontraditional live jazz.

Four tours throughout 2022 included stops across the Midwest (May-June), New York and Connecticut (June), New England (July), and Florida (November), led by Anthony Hervey, Sean Mason, Sarah Hanahan, and Tyreek McDole, respectively. Collaborators in these regions have continued to pursue jazz programming, including a future crossover with JALC’s Let Freedom Swing in Miami.

Jazz on the Road also led to exciting opportunities for all four bandleaders. Hervey released his debut album Words From My Horn this past May. Mason’s tour led to the creation of a new album, The Southern Suite, that was just released on Blue Engine Records. Hanahan’s tour culminated in the recording of an episode for Jazz Night in America on NPR. And McDole, after moving to New York City this past June, has become one of the most sought-after jazz vocalists. Across the board, the bandleaders and the musicians praised the importance of the artistic, financial, and operational support that these tours provided.

“I’VE GROWN EXPONENTIALLY, AND I AM MORE PREPARED THAN EVER TO BE A BANDLEADER. I’LL CARRY THIS WISDOM FOR THE REST OF MY LIFE.”

- TYREEK McDOLE
Vocalist

“OUR PRESENTING PARTNERS HAVE BEEN EXTREMELY GRATEFUL AND APPRECIATIVE TO HAVE HAD SUCH HIGH-LEVEL ARTISTS PERFORMING AT THEIR VENUES AND TO THEIR AUDIENCES.”

- JASON OLAINE
Vice President, Programming
This past year, Jazz at Lincoln Center’s education department provided a broad musical foundation for students of all ages and levels of experience through classes, concerts, and presentations. Artists honed their craft at numerous and widely esteemed JALC jazz academies, as well as the Essentially Ellington program, which provides free resources to thousands of high school and college jazz ensembles globally, and includes regional festivals and a yearly competition. Also, JALC had a first-time, weekend-long residency with nine Historically Black Colleges and Universities. And for those just starting out, WeBop classes and the Let Freedom Swing program continue to be great resources for introducing children to jazz.

Swing University had a history-packed lineup of internationally themed classes accessed throughout the year by JALC’s online community. An abundance of new students and jazz supporters across the U.S. and around the globe—as well as the organization’s world-wide distribution of its unique educational material—has widely contributed to the continuing growth of JALC education.
ALL THAT JAZZ

Since 1995, high school musicians have traveled to Jazz at Lincoln Center’s home, Frederick P. Rose Hall in New York City, to spend three days immersed in workshops, jam sessions, and rehearsals with the hopes their band will take home top honors in the Essentially Ellington Jazz Band Competition & Festival, a program for high school jazz ensembles that underscores the historical importance of jazz to future generations. One bright star, showing a consistent standard of excellence over the past decade, is Osceola County School for the Arts, a 6-12 grade public magnet school in Kissimmee, FL. They became finalists first in 2014, and then again in 2017 and 2019. In 2022 and 2023, they earned back-to-back first place honors at Essentially Ellington, becoming only the second Title 1 school to win the competition in 28 years. The Essentially Ellington High School Jazz Program is supported by an endowment from the Susan Rudin Charitable Fund and Gail and Al Engelberg.

“Essentially Ellington is a big part of what got me to where I am today. Since attending, there’s been an overwhelming love and support for Osceola students that hasn’t been there before and I’ve seen it uplift my community at home in such an amazing way.”

- Nathaniel Williford, Former Osceola student and future Juilliard graduate

RISING STARS

JALC’s Jazz Academy youth programs, including their flagship ensemble the Jazz at Lincoln Center Youth Orchestra, are in their 20th year of educating young musicians. Every Saturday and Sunday, students in grades six through 12 receive invaluable instruction through classes in jazz language, history, and combos, and participate in one of their seven big bands. Programming covers the entire scope of the rich and varied history of jazz—from New Orleans music to newly created scores by prominent composers and arrangers, including members of the Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra. This past year, youth programming welcomed guest artists such as legendary trumpeter Randy Brecker and up-and-coming tenor saxophonist phenom Nicole Glover who engaged and mentored students. Jazz Academy pedagogy is rooted in the philosophy that “all jazz is modern” and each new generation of students brings contemporary relevance to previous generations’ musical triumphs.

“JALC JAZZ ACADEMIES NURTURED ME INTO THE MUSICIAN I AM TODAY AND ULTIMATELY TAUGHT ME A LARGE PORTION OF EVERYTHING I KNOW MUSICALLY. THE FRIENDSHIPS, CONNECTIONS, AND OPPORTUNITIES THAT IT HAS PROVIDED CAN ONLY BE DESCRIBED AS PRICELESS. THEY ARE FAMILY.”

- Elijah Allen
Former JALC Youth Orchestra member and Jazz Academy graduate

“JALC’s Jazz Academy programs have given me the opportunity to explore and develop my passion for jazz music with the support of dedicated and knowledgeable educators. Through rigorous training and exposure to the rich history and evolution of jazz, I have gained a deeper understanding and appreciation for this genre.”

- Nathaniel Williford
Former Osceola student and future Juilliard graduate

EMBRACING LEGACY

This past year, Jazz at Lincoln Center launched a first-of-its-kind collaboration with Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs). On Feb. 23-25, the Virginia Arts Festival hosted nine HBCU jazz bands for a weekend-long residency. The nine participating colleges were appointed a mentor from the JLCO, who provided feedback and shared rehearsal techniques. Band directors also received invitations to a special dinner hosted by Wynton Marsalis, while HBCU musicians had their own one-on-one Q&A session with Marsalis. Students also participated in a jam session and section workshops with JLCO members. The weekend ended with each school playing a 20-minute set, adjudicated by Marsalis and members of the JLCO, who handed out awards to outstanding soloists and sections. The two top-performing bands, Benedict College and Norfolk State, each played an opening set for the evening JLCO concert, with guest soloists from the orchestra.

“THE BENEDICT COLLEGE JAZZ ENSEMBLE GAINED A PHENOMENAL EXPERIENCE PARTICIPATING IN THE HBCU RESIDENCY WITH WYNTON AND THE JAZZ AT LINCOLN CENTER ORCHESTRA. MUSIC IS A MESSAGE THAT BRINGS UNIVERSAL LOVE TO ALL, AND THIS RESIDENCY WAS AMPLE ENOUGH EVIDENCE OF THAT FACT!”
- H. WADE JOHNSON, Director, Benedict College Jazz Band Columbia, South Carolina

HISTORY LESSON

Let Freedom Swing has become one of JALC’s hallmark education programs. Inspired by 2007 conversations between former Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O’Connor and Wynton Marsalis, the program pairs jazz performances with lessons in American history, civics, and civil rights. The live concerts include a teacher’s guide written by renowned historian, author, and multi-Emmy Award winner Geoffrey C. Ward. With a focus on Title 1 schools and communities in socio-economic need, this past year the program served New York City, Chicago, Los Angeles, Detroit, New Orleans, Mesa, AZ, Bentonville, AK, and London, UK.

“YOUR MUSICIANS COME INTO OUR SCHOOL AND SWEEP US OFF OUR FEET! OUR STUDENTS ANTICIPATE EVERY CONCERT FOR WEEKS. PARENTS REPORT THAT THEIR CHILDREN GO HOME AND LISTEN TO JAZZ MUSIC ON YOUTUBE AND STAY CURIOUS ABOUT THE HARLEM RENAISSANCE AND CLASSICAL AND MODERN JAZZ IN GENERAL. YOUR PROGRAM IS WORKING!”
- VANESSA AJA-SIGMUND, PS 127 The McKinley Park School Brooklyn, NY

Essentially Ellington (EE), a Jazz at Lincoln Center signature program created to share Duke Ellington’s rich canon as a comprehensive teaching guide to high school bands, has grown exponentially since its creation in 1995. Every year, in meticulously detailed performance-ready editions, JALC transcribes and publishes a selection of Duke Ellington’s original compositions and arrangements. These selections are then distributed free to high schools and colleges in all 50 states, as well as internationally. Throughout the school year, EE provides ongoing support to participating students and teachers by providing access to online teaching guides and rehearsal videos that correspond directly to the current year’s charts. In 2008, Jazz at Lincoln Center expanded its materials to include repertoire from pivotal composers Benny Carter, Mary Lou Williams, Dizzy Gillespie, and Fletcher Henderson.

Year-round Essentially Ellington programming includes non-competitive EE Regional Festivals—founded in 2006 and co-produced in local communities across the U.S.—and culminates in the highly anticipated three-day Essentially Ellington Jazz Band Competition & Festival, held at Frederick P. Rose Hall each May. The competition allows students, teachers, and musicians from across North America to participate in workshops, rehearsals, and performances, concluding with an evening concert and awards ceremony featuring the three top-placing bands. The education-focused regional festivals offer high school jazz bands the opportunity to perform EE music and receive professional feedback from JALC clinicians.

Essentially Ellington is a proven incubator for future jazz artists. Many EE students go on to grace the stages of JALC — as well as tour, record, and appear at major festivals — including JLCO bassist Carlos Henriquez and drummer Obed Calvaire, frequent JLCO substitute saxophonists Alexa Tarantino and Abdias Armenteros, pianist Joe Block, trumpeter Anthony Hervey, and Blue Engine recording artists, pianist Isaiah J. Thompson and trumpeter Summer Camargo.

Since its founding in 2015, Jazz at Lincoln Center’s Blue Engine record label has flourished. In conjunction with the R. Theodore Ammon Archives and Music Library, the label has released more than 30 projects and aims to increase its output moving forward. Releases include historical jazz concerts from JALC’s archives dating back to 1987, as well as new, innovative works from Wynton Marsalis, the JLCO, and up-and-coming artists.

Last fall, Blue Engine Media launched Jazz Live, a premier video streaming app that provides a cohesive way for audiences everywhere to experience the virtuosic breadth of jazz. Among its many facets, the app also features highlights from the label’s extensive catalog, including excerpts from two culturally significant albums released this past spring: Isaiah J. Thompson’s The Power of the Spirit and Wynton Marsalis’ The Jungle.

Leadership support for Blue Engine Media was provided by John and Jody Arnhold and by Dan and Karen Pritzker during the 2022/2023 concert season.

Founding support of Blue Engine Media was provided by Leonard and Louise Riggio and Lisa and David Schiff.
ISAIAH J. THOMPSON’S

THE POWER OF THE SPIRIT

“A young musician and composer with a mature touch and rare combination of talent, creativity, humility and honesty” (NPR), pianist Isaiah J. Thompson is an emerging generational talent. This past March, he issued his first live album—The Power of the Spirit—on Blue Engine Records.

Captured in front of a rapturous audience at Jazz at Lincoln Center’s Dizzy’s Club, The Power of the Spirit finds Thompson’s seasoned quartet delivering a locked-in performance of their hard bop repertoire. On full display are the pianist’s stunning dexterity and soulful original material; combining crisp technicality with a gospel-infected sound, Thompson nods to forebears like Bobby Timmons, Phineas Newborn Jr., and Cedar Walton while blazing a trail all his own.

“New York City is the most fluid, pressure-packed, and cosmopolitan metropolis the modern world has ever seen,” says Wynton Marsalis. No wonder, then, that the city inspired what is perhaps the composer’s greatest work to date. The Jungle, his fourth symphony, received its first recorded release this past May on Blue Engine Records.

Captured in 2019, this inspired performance of The Jungle was conducted by Nicholas Buc and features the Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis alongside the Melbourne Symphony Orchestra in Melbourne’s Hamer Hall. Marsalis’ masterwork highlights the paradoxes that define New York City, where wealth and poverty, grit and romance, and unlimited growth and stagnation all coexist. But it’s also a meditation on what being human means today—a wide-scale attempt to understand the maelstrom of modern life and remind listeners of what brings us together.

This past September, Blue Engine Media introduced Jazz Live. This subscription-based streaming app encompasses a treasure trove of Jazz at Lincoln Center digital content, made accessible, in part, by Bloomberg Philanthropies’ Digital Accelerator Program. Available on desktops, phones, tablets, and smart TVs, Jazz Live invites audiences to immerse themselves in the music through new concert webcasts, a rotating selection of archival performances, and content ranging from artist interviews to documentary series.

The new original series Where Jazz Lives jointly launched with Jazz Live last fall. The program transports viewers to Kansas City, Seattle, Amsterdam, Newark, and Paris to meet the musicians, educators, promoters, and historians who define the great jazz scenes of the world.
